Son Boter

A typical rural Mallorcan house built in the 18th century which Joan Miró bought in 1959, thanks to the monetary prize that he received the previous year when he won the New York Guggenheim International Award. Son Boter allowed Miró to extend his work areas and it was a place that acted as a retreat for him. In Son Boter, he created some of his most important large works of art.

The exteriors of Son Boter can now be hired as a venue for private activities and events, held both during the day and in the evening.
